

Our Successes

Archive

Print this story

Send us your story

Kim Caruso, Davis Vision, honored as one of the 50 Most Influential Women in Optical

Vision Monday chooses Davis Vision director of Provider Recruiting for fourth annual report on professional women in eyecare

(August 24, 2006) The growing contributions of women throughout the optical industry have been recognized by the industry publication, Vision Monday, for the fourth year.

This year, Kim Caruso, Davis Vision's director of Provider Recruiting, was one of those chosen for recognition because of her key role in building Davis Vision's national network of providers to nearly 25,000 and because she exhibits a thorough understanding of the optical industry and a strong sense of professionalism.

Kim Caruso, director of Provider Recruiting, Davis Vision

Nominations for the award were solicited in several optical publications, including Vision Monday, 20/20 and the Review of Optometry.

More stories

Highmark ranks among top Blue plans in BlueCard Performance Index

Plan Excellence Award earned by Highmark's Federal Employees Program \(FEP\) unit

Highmark is a hit with radio station

As director of Provider Recruiting, Caruso leads a team of company associates working to sign up eyecare practitioners for Davis Vision nationwide. A 25-year veteran with the company, she helped to build Davis Vision's provider panel from the ground up.

Caruso has held concurrent managerial positions with Davis Vision in the areas of provider relations, frames and shipping. She serves as the liaison between managed-vision clients and providers, answering their questions and providing information.

"I've truly grown with Davis Vision," says Caruso. "The company has always recognized women's potential and offered them equal opportunities for advancement."

Back to Top